General Apathy.

Last Saturday night, James Ball and Walter Mabry spoke at Bellflower. Mr. Mabry stated that he would vote for a better road law when he went over to the legislature and that he would buy his own ticket to Jefferson City, so that the rail road lobby could not have any chance to lead him astray or words to that effect. This is all very good for anti-election promises on the part of Mr. Mabry, but Mr. Mabry is not elected just yet, and if the republicans do their duty he will not be elected. In confirmation of this let two democrats speak. One said to the other "do you know that the republicans have a majority in this county?" the other answered "yes sir, but they don't know it." The first democrat, then said "what are we going to do about it?" The second one said "oh, well, we'll attend to that."

Here is an open confession from two democrats high in the party who are reported to have said that the republicans have a majority but that they would fix it or words to that effect.

Our Greatest Americans.

Twenty-nine of America's sons are to be honored in the House of Fame. We find in this list George Peabody and Peter Cooper, men known and admired by every American citizen because of their plans for the relief of suffering humanity and the betterment of American institutions.

As Statesmen, we find George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and John Adams. A trinity of foresight, of knowledge, of existent conditions and of deeds that will forever live in the minds of the American people.

To this list we would add Daniel Webster, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and Henry Clay, a quartet whose genius stands out upon the pages of American history, speaking for American government the perfection it has attained.

Of poets and authors who were deemed worthy of a place in the hall of fame are to be found Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry W. Longfellow, Washington Irving and Nathaniel Hawthorne. These men of learning, of letters and of literary renown, have been well chosen, for none are greater.

Along with these great inventors Robert Fulton, Samuel F. B. Morse and Eli Whitney, have been selected. These men who have revolutionized labor and made America the most progressive nation of the world, should live forever in the minds of the people.

The great preachers of the Gospel, Beecher, Channing and Edwards, have been selected as worthy of a nation's highest honor for the greatness of their Christian work.

Asa Gray and John James Audubon both renowned as scientists, will look down from their niche in the Hall of Fame as an inspiration to coming generations.

The law student can look up to John Marshall, James Kent and Joseph Story as America's greatest lawyers and judges and breathe the inspiration of their logic and wisdom.

Gilbert Stuart the painter and Horace Mann, the educator, enjoy a panel in the Hall of Fame, and well may they, for none are greater.

Of all our great soldiers thought worthy of an imperishable renown in

Miss Wilkins's New Novel.

Mary E. Wilkins has just finished a new novel, which has been secured by the Ladies' Home Journal. The social life of a small town is her theme. She reveals its romances, its humors and its tragedies with that charming realism which characterizes the writings of this popular novelist.

The Mexico Ledger tells a story of the honesty of the late A. B. Daniel. In 1868 he found an express package containing $10,000 that had fallen from a car window. It was intended for a bank at Carrollton, Mo. He kept his find a secret and next day walked to Carrollton to deliver the package.

He was an honest man—the noblest work of God. But they are not so scarce as they seem. The old world has lots of that class, but they have to suffer for the sins of the other class that believe that a dollar once in possession, like the proverbial bird in hand, is the only way to get along in life.—B.
